

JU.MP Web Design

Cold Call Sales Training Manual

Purpose of This Manual

This manual is designed to train JU.MP Web Design representatives to confidently introduce our services, explain the $48/month website package, handle common questions, and communicate what makes JU.MP different from traditional agencies, freelancers, and DIY website builders.

The goal of the cold call is not to pressure someone into buying immediately. The goal is to:

1. Get the business owner's attention.
 2. Explain what JU.MP does.
 3. Clearly communicate the value of the $48/month package.
 4. Answer basic questions.
 5. Determine whether the business is interested.
 6. Move interested prospects toward the next step.

1. The JU.MP Value Proposition

JU.MP Web Design works primarily with small businesses that need a professional online presence without the cost and complexity of hiring a traditional web agency or a full-time employee.

We provide an ongoing website and branding solution, rather than simply building a website once and walking away.

Our core idea:

We sit in the middle between expensive agencies and doing everything yourself.

A business owner generally has several options:

Option 1 — Hire an Agency

A traditional agency can provide excellent work, but it can be expensive and may involve large upfront costs and ongoing fees.

Option 2 — Hire a Freelancer

A freelancer may build the website for a one-time fee, but after the project is finished, the business owner may be left trying to find someone else whenever they need changes or additional work.

There can also be a branding problem when different freelancers create different materials at different times.

Option 3 — Do It Yourself

The business owner can attempt to build and maintain everything themselves, but this takes time and requires them to learn website design, hosting, security, branding, and other technical skills.

Option 4 — JU.MP

JU.MP provides an ongoing solution designed specifically for small businesses.

We help create and maintain the website while also creating a consistent visual identity that the business can continue using.

The goal is simple: professional online branding without the cost and complexity of a traditional agency.

2. The Standard Cold Call Script

Representatives should become comfortable with this script.

Do not sound like you are reading a script word-for-word. The script is a framework for the conversation.

Opening

“Hey, is this [Business Name]?”

Once they confirm:

“Hey [Business Name], my name is [Representative Name], and I work with JU.MP Web Design. I saw your business on Google Maps and noticed that you don’t seem to have a website, so I figured I’d give you a quick call to offer our services.”

Then:

“We partner with small businesses in order to run their websites and help create better online branding. We charge $48 a month, and that covers everything you would need to get your website up and running and maintained. Is that something you would be interested in?”

Then stop talking.

Let the prospect respond.

3. The $48/Month Package

The representative needs to know exactly what the customer is receiving.

If the customer asks:

“What exactly does the $48 cover?”

The representative should be able to clearly explain the four major components.

The $48/month package covers four major things:

1. Hosting, Domain Registration & Website Creation

The package includes the infrastructure needed to get the customer’s website online, including:

- Website hosting
- Domain registration
- Domain management
- Website creation

The customer doesn’t have to figure out how to purchase hosting, connect a domain, or manage the technical setup themselves.

2. SSL Certificates & Security Checks

The website includes:

- SSL certification
- Security checks
- Basic security maintenance

The purpose is to help keep the website secure and functioning properly.

3. Proactive Site Checks & Monitoring

JU.MP doesn't simply build the website and disappear.

We proactively check and monitor the website.

This helps identify issues before the customer has to discover them themselves.

The value here is ongoing management.

The customer isn't responsible for constantly checking whether their website is working properly.

4. Four Edits or Revisions Per Month

Customers receive:

Up to four edits or revisions per month.

This allows them to keep their website current.

Examples might include:

- Changing business information
- Updating service descriptions
- Changing contact information
- Updating text
- Making small website changes
- Updating images or other content

The important point is that the customer isn't purchasing a website that becomes frozen after launch.

They have an ongoing way to request changes.

4. The Simple Way to Explain the $48

If the prospect doesn't want a long explanation, use this:

“The $48 covers four main things: your hosting and domain, SSL and security checks, proactive website monitoring, and four edits or revisions every month. So rather than paying someone to build a website once and then having to figure out maintenance yourself, we’re managing it for you on an ongoing basis.”

This is one of the most important explanations in the entire sales process.

5. JU.MP Is More Than Web Design

Representatives should understand that JU.MP isn't simply selling websites.

We are also filling a branding niche.

The goal is to create a consistent identity for the business.

A website shouldn't feel like it was designed by one person, while the business cards were designed by someone completely different, and the logo came from somewhere else.

Instead, JU.MP can help create a cohesive visual identity.

6. Branding Services

When appropriate, explain that JU.MP can help establish a business's visual identity.

This can include:

- Brand colors
- Logos
- Website design
- Custom illustrations
- Visual design elements
- Other branded materials

The customer can then continue using that branding throughout their business.

For example:

A customer may initially purchase the website package.

Later, they may need:

- Business cards
- Additional design work
- Marketing materials
- Other branded graphics

Because the branding was established through JU.MP, the additional materials can be designed to match the existing website.

The goal:

Seamless online branding integration.

Everything should feel like it belongs to the same business.

7. We Never Use Stock Images

This is an important selling point.

JU.MP does not use stock images as the foundation of its websites.

Instead:

We create custom illustrations and visual elements.

This allows the website to have a more unique identity rather than looking like thousands of other websites using the same stock photography.

Representatives can explain it like this:

“One thing that makes us different is that we don’t just throw stock images onto a template. We create custom illustrations and branding so the website actually feels like it belongs to your business.”

8. Our Design Specialty

JU.MP specializes particularly in landing pages and contact pages for service-based businesses.

This is especially relevant to businesses such as:

- Contractors
- Detailers
- Landscapers
- Tree services
- Groomers
- Local service providers
- Other small service-based businesses

The objective is to make the website useful for turning visitors into potential customers.

A service business generally needs to answer a few basic questions quickly:

1. What does the business do?
2. Why should someone choose them?
3. What services do they provide?
4. Where do they operate?
5. How can the customer contact them?

A good landing page should make those answers easy to find.

9. Custom & Complex Websites

JU.MP can take on more customized and complex website projects.

However, our normal approach is to keep the core offering relatively simple and lower-ticket.

This allows us to focus on small businesses that don't need a massive website or complicated system.

Representatives should not promise complex features or special functionality without checking with the appropriate person at JU.MP first.

If someone asks for something significantly outside the standard package, say:

“We can definitely look at custom projects as well. I’d just need to get the details and have our team determine what’s possible and what the pricing would look like.”

10. E-Commerce

JU.MP does not currently offer e-commerce websites as part of its standard services.

E-commerce websites can be significantly more complicated because they involve things such as:

- Products
- Shopping carts
- Payments
- Inventory
- Orders
- Customer accounts
- More complicated client management

Because of this, JU.MP has chosen to focus primarily on simpler service-business websites and branding.

If someone asks:

“Can you build me an online store?”

Do not promise that we can.

Instead:

“We currently specialize more in service-business websites and landing pages rather than e-commerce. We can still take down your information and see if it’s something we can accommodate as a custom project, but e-commerce isn’t our standard offering.”

11. Who JU.MP Is Best For

Our ideal customer is generally a small business that needs a professional website and consistent branding without wanting to spend a large amount of money on a traditional agency.

Good prospects may include businesses that:

- Have no website
 - Have an outdated website
 - Have a poor-quality website
 - Have inconsistent branding
 - Need a professional landing page
 - Need a better contact page
 - Don't want to manage their own website
 - Don't have someone dedicated to website maintenance

12. Explaining the Problem We Solve

A representative should understand the customer's problem before trying to sell the solution.

Many small businesses fall into one of three situations:

“I don't have a website.”

They may be relying entirely on Google Maps, Facebook, Instagram, word of mouth, or other platforms.

“I have a website, but it's outdated.”

The website exists, but it doesn't represent the quality of the business.

“I had someone build my website, but now I don't know who manages it.”

The freelancer finished the project and disappeared, or the customer doesn't have an ongoing relationship with the person who built it.

JU.MP addresses that third problem particularly well.

13. The Key Difference: Ongoing Relationship

One of the strongest points to communicate is:

JU.MP isn't just a one-time website builder.

We aim to become the business's ongoing website and branding partner.

Instead of:

Build website → hand it over → goodbye

The model is:

Build website → maintain website → monitor website → make ongoing edits → provide additional branding/design when needed

This gives the business owner someone they can continue coming back to.

14. Branding Consistency Example

Use an example when the prospect doesn't immediately understand the branding concept.

Example:

"Let's say we build your website and establish your logo, colors, fonts, and illustration style. Six months later you need business cards. Instead of going to another designer who creates something completely different, you can come back to us and have those business cards designed to match the branding we already created for your website."

Then explain:

"That's what we mean by seamless branding. Your website, business cards, graphics, and other materials can all look like they came from the same brand."

15. Common Customer Questions

“Why is it $48 a month?”

Answer:

“The $48 isn’t just for the website itself. It covers the ongoing service. That includes hosting and domain management, SSL and security checks, proactive site monitoring, and four edits or revisions every month.”

“Do I have to manage the website myself?”

Answer:

“No. That’s one of the main reasons our service exists. We handle the ongoing website management so you don’t have to figure everything out yourself.”

“What if I need changes?”

Answer:

“You get four edits or revisions each month as part of the $48 package.”

If they need something beyond the standard included edits, don’t make promises about additional work or pricing. Explain that additional work can be discussed separately.

“Do you use templates?”

Answer:

“We focus on creating a custom brand experience rather than just putting stock images into a generic template. We also create custom illustrations and branding elements.”

“Do you do logos?”

Answer:

“Yes, branding is an important part of what we do. We can help establish things like your logo, colors, and visual identity so everything works together.”

“Can you make business cards?”

Answer:

“We can handle custom branding and design work as well. One of the benefits is that we can keep additional materials consistent with the branding established for your website.”

“Can you build an online store?”

Answer:

“E-commerce isn’t part of our standard offering because those websites are significantly more complicated to manage. We primarily specialize in service-business websites and landing pages. We can look at custom projects on a case-by-case basis.”

16. Handling “I Already Have a Website”

Do not immediately argue with the customer.

Ask a question.

“Gotcha. Are you happy with the website you have now?”

If they say no:

“What would you say you don’t like about it?”

This gives the representative an opportunity to discover the customer’s actual problem.

Potential problems include:

- Website is outdated
- Website is slow
- Website doesn’t look professional

- No one updates it
- Branding doesn't match
- They can't easily make changes
- They don't know who manages it

Then explain how JU.MP could potentially help.

17. Handling “I’m Not Interested”

Do not become aggressive.

Try one simple follow-up:

“Totally understand. Just so I know, is it mainly because you already have someone handling your website, or is a website just not something you’re looking for right now?”

The goal isn't to pressure them.

The goal is to understand the objection.

If they're clearly not interested, thank them and move on.

18. Handling “I Don’t Need a Website”

You can respond:

“I understand. A lot of the businesses we talk to already get customers through referrals or Google Maps. The idea isn't necessarily to replace what you're already doing. It's to give potential customers another place to see your services, learn about your business, and contact you while keeping your branding professional and consistent.”

Then stop and let them respond.

19. Handling “I Don’t Have Time”

Keep it short:

“Totally understand. I don’t want to take up your time. Would you be open to a quick follow-up at a better time?”

The goal is to respect the business owner’s time.

20. Handling “How Much Does It Cost?”

The answer is simple:

“Our standard package is $48 a month.”

Then explain what it includes:

“That includes hosting and domain registration, SSL and security checks, proactive site monitoring, and four edits or revisions each month.”

Do not bury the price in a long explanation.

21. The Representative’s Tone

The way you say the script matters as much as the words.

Sound:

- Friendly
- Confident
- Professional
- Conversational
- Helpful
- Direct

Don’t sound:

- Desperate
- Aggressive
- Robotic
- Overly rehearsed

- Pushy
- Like you're reading an advertisement

The prospect should feel like they're talking to a person, not listening to a commercial.

22. Don't Over-Explain

A common mistake for new sales representatives is talking too much.

The opening should be short.

Explain the offer.

Then ask:

“Is that something you would be interested in?”

Let them answer.

If they say yes, continue the conversation.

If they have questions, answer the question.

Don't dump every detail about JU.MP onto someone who hasn't shown interest yet.

23. The Sales Conversation Structure

Think of the call as five stages.

Stage 1 — Introduction

“Hey, is this [Business Name]?”

Stage 2 — Reason for Calling

“My name is [Name], and I work with JU.MP Web Design. I saw your business on Google Maps and noticed you don't seem to have a website...”

Stage 3 — Offer

“We partner with small businesses to run their websites and help create better online branding. We charge $48 a month...”

Stage 4 — Qualification

Ask questions and listen.

Examples:

“Do you currently have a website?”

“Are you happy with the website you have?”

“Do you currently have someone managing it?”

Stage 5 — Next Step

If they're interested, move the conversation toward the appropriate next step rather than continuing to talk endlessly.

24. Questions Representatives Should Ask

When a prospect shows interest, use questions to understand their situation.

Website

“Do you currently have a website?”

If yes:

“Are you happy with how it looks?”

Management

“Do you have someone currently managing your website?”

Branding

“Do you already have a logo and established brand colors?”

Business

“What type of services do you mainly offer?”

Goals

“What would you want your website to accomplish for you?”

These questions help the representative understand what the customer actually needs.

25. What Not to Promise

Representatives must not promise things they aren't authorized to promise.

Do not guarantee:

- A specific number of customers
- A specific amount of increased revenue
- Google rankings
- Guaranteed SEO results
- Complex functionality without approval
- E-commerce functionality
- Unlimited revisions
- Custom work for free
- A specific delivery date unless authorized

Remember:

Sell the service. Don't invent guarantees.

26. What Makes JU.MP Different

Representatives should be able to summarize JU.MP in one sentence:

“JU.MP is an ongoing website and branding partner for small businesses, giving them a professional online presence and continued support without having to hire an expensive agency or manage everything themselves.”

Or even shorter:

“We give small businesses a professional website and ongoing branding support without the cost and complexity of a traditional agency.”

27. The JU.MP Positioning

The three alternatives can be remembered as:

Too Expensive

Traditional Agency

Too Much Work

DIY

Too Disconnected

One-Time Freelancer

JU.MP

Ongoing Partner

That’s the position JU.MP should occupy in the customer’s mind.

28. Full Example Call

Representative:

“Hey, is this ABC Landscaping?”

Customer:

“Yeah.”

Representative:

“Hey ABC Landscaping, my name is John, and I work with JU.MP Web Design. I saw your business on Google Maps and noticed that you don’t seem to have a website, so I figured I’d give you a quick call to offer our services.”

“We partner with small businesses in order to run their websites and help create better online branding. We charge $48 a month, and that covers everything you would need to get your website up and running and maintained. Is that something you would be interested in?”

Customer:

“What does the $48 cover?”

Representative:

“The $48 covers four main things. It covers your hosting and domain registration and creation, SSL certificates and security checks, proactive site checks and monitoring, and four edits or revisions every month.”

“We’re also more than just a website company. We focus on branding as well. We don’t use stock images—we create custom illustrations and can establish things like your logo, brand colors, and overall visual identity. So if you eventually need things like business cards or additional design work, we can make everything match the website.”

Customer:

“Oh, okay.”

Representative:

“Exactly. The idea is to give you one place to handle your online branding instead of having one person build your website, another person make your business cards, and everything end up looking different.”

29. The Mindset of a JU.MP Representative

Remember what you’re actually selling.

You’re not simply selling:

“A website for $48 a month.”

You’re selling:

Professional online presence + ongoing website management + consistent branding.

The customer gets a partner they can continue working with instead of having to constantly find new people for different projects.

30. Final Sales Principles

1. Be conversational.

Don't sound like you're reading.

2. Get to the point.

Business owners are busy.

3. Explain the $48 clearly.

Know the four included components:

Hosting & domain → SSL & security → monitoring → four monthly edits/revisions.

4. Sell the ongoing relationship.

JU.MP isn't simply a one-time website builder.

5. Emphasize branding.

Website, logo, colors, illustrations, business cards, and future design work can be kept visually consistent.

6. Mention custom illustrations.

We never use stock images.

7. Focus on service businesses.

Our specialty is landing pages and contact pages for service-based businesses.

8. Don't oversell.

If the customer needs something outside the standard offering, get the information and have it reviewed.

9. Don't argue with objections.

Ask questions and understand the customer's situation.

10. Listen more than you talk.

Once the customer starts explaining their business, let them talk.

The best sales conversations don't feel like sales pitches.

They feel like a business owner explaining a problem and a representative showing them how JU.MP can solve it.
